General Information

Lagos and the Algarve

Lagos is one of the Algarve's top destination cities. Situated on the western edge of the region, it has a dramatic coastline that has been carved by the Atlantic Ocean. This geography gives Lagos a beautiful mediterranean climate with prevailing ocean breezes and mild winters, which can have intermittent rainfall. In the peak season, which can start from as early as beginning of May and go all the way to the end of October, temperatures are typically in the high 20's, reaching high 30's in July and August. Boasting a historic old town, modern marina, cultural attractions, with some incredible beaches and scenery, it really combines much of what the Algarve is famous for. In fact, it's probably got so much to do that a day trip to Lagos really doesn't do it justice. It's a perfect place to spend a long weekend, or longer holiday. With a wide variety of bars, pubs, and restaurants it's a lively place that doesn't suffer from the same seasonality that some of the smaller resorts and towns in the Algarve suffer from.
